A study in Cyberpsychology, Behavior and Social Networking warns, “The more time people spend on Facebook, the happier they perceived their friends to be and the sadder they felt as a consequence.” According to a recent report, half of the college students spend more than five hours on social networking websites. Both reports indicate the problem that college students hanging on social networking websites for long hours are possibly unhappier and spend relatively fewer hours studying and doing other kinds of activities.

Do you agree to the above statement? In your opinion, is there a dark side to social networking websites? Why or why not? Give evidence to support your ideas.
